MORNINGS:

Pre-booked routine work is carried out in the morning. We have 28 full time Veterinary Surgeons who have their own farms to look after. We like to build good relationships with our clients by designating them their own Vet who will continue to do all their routines and get to know the history and problems that may be occurring on the farm. This prevents clients having to repeat themselves to a different Vet that is unaware of the farm's history.

Students will be expected to start from 8am to ensure that they get out on the best visits of the day. Please check that arrangements have been made with the Vet the day before. Any animal requiring veterinary attention will be seen in the morning by the Vet in that area. All emergencies cases are seen as soon as possible.

AFTERNOONS:

Most afternoons will be covered by calf castrations, de-horning, lameness examinations and surgery. We also carry out Bull Fertility Routines for clients wanting to have their bull MOT'd. This procedure provides a written report on the health and fertility of the bull on that day and could avoid a serious problem were a bull to be visually normal but sub/infertile.

Westpoint now has two bull crushes, which will assist the vet in carrying out procedures such as bull fertility health checks and foot trimming.

We play an active part in castrations and de-horning procedures for young cattle. This enables our clients to have piece of mind that the procedures are carried out safely and by a professional.

What does Westpoint offer you?

We always try to provide students seeing practice with a broad experience of a specialist livestock practice. Our aim is to sit down with you and discuss what you want to get out of your time here and help you to improve in areas where you feel you need to work on. For example if you want to work on your pregnancy diagnosis skills then we can plan your week to see as many cow's as possible.

We want to include you in clinical discussions that go on in the practice, either informally or during our monthly 'clinical club' discussion evenings.

In addition to working on your clinical skills we also want to show you how a vet practice operates 'behind the scenes', including demonstrating how important the team of lay-staff are at running a practice.

What can you offer Westpoint?

We will try our hardest to provide you with the best EMS that we can, but there is also a requirement for you to 'get stuck in'. We like to see students helping around the practice when things are quiet.

The students who get the most out of seeing practice at Westpoint are those that put a lot in. When out on calls feel free to ask questions, especially to the farmers. Most are more than happy to chat about their farming systems and how they do things. They are a great source of information.

In essence we like vet students who muck in and are prepared to get their hands dirty.

PS Don't forget to bring your wellies!
